Funding opportunities Africa

Name	Program Level (Master, PhD)	Short Description (criteria, deadlines...)	Countries applicable	More info
Daughters for life	Master	It provides fully funded and partial educational opportunities for young women from North Africa and the Middle East to pursue graduate studies at partner universities in Europe and North America, including key programs in Belgium. Candidates must navigate a dual application process by first applying for admission directly to the university and then submitting a separate scholarship application to DFL. While university admission deadlines vary based on the institution, the DFL scholarship application window typically closes early in the calendar year (usually January) for the upcoming fall intake.	Palestine, Israel, Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, and Morocco	Read more
Ghana Scholarships Authority (Foreign Tertiary Scholarships)	Master	Government funding for Ghanaians to pursue strategic training abroad, historically covering tuition, accommodation, and living allowances. Must be a Ghanaian citizen with a first degree of at least second class (for a master's) and unconditional admission to a recognized foreign university. There is no single annual deadline; the Authority opens specific foreign/bilateral calls throughout the year that typically only stay open for 2 to 4 weeks. C*rucial note:* Revise whether Belgium is included in the government's specific bilateral agreements for that given year.	Ghana	Read more
National Research Foundation (NRF)	Master, PhD, postdoctoral	South Africa's premier national research funding agency. For students aiming for Belgium, this is typically used for split-site PhDs, joint degrees, or postdoctoral fellowships. Requires a minimum academic average of 65% in the	South Africa	Read more

Postgraduate Funding		previous degree. Most general funding limits applicants by age (e.g., 30 years or younger for master's funding). Calls typically open in April/May. Deadlines vary by category but generally fall in mid-summer (e.g., July 3 for master's and doctoral funding or June 30 for freestanding postdoctoral fellowships).		