

Poverty and the Tragedy of the Welfare State – Towards a new social contract?

SEMINAR

at the occasion of

Golden Jubilee Herman Deleeck Centre for Social Policy & Prof. Bea Cantillon's Retirement

4–5 NOVEMBER 2022

Hof Van Liere, University of Antwerp, Prinsstraat 13, 2000 Antwerp

CONVERSATIONS WITH CSB FRIENDS PAST AND PRESENT

In recent decades, rich welfare-states have enjoyed growth in income, work and social spending. Welfare states worked harder than ever before. They were resilient and, to a certain extent, able to adapt to major social and economic transitions. However, relative income poverty among the working-age population is stagnating or increasing in many developed welfare states in Europe and beyond, while, the 'welfare states' social spending and programs have, in general, also been deepening and broadening.

This suggests a fading away of the effectiveness of mature welfare states on poverty reduction. Have welfare states failed to properly adapt to the great transformations of our time? Have they changed but bet on wrong horses? Or is there more to it: is the welfare state experiencing a systemic crisis because of increased structural constraints on poverty reduction? And which strategies are needed in order to deal with the aftermath of the pandemic and the current inflation crisis but also to cope with on-going global challenges for societies such as climate change and ageing.

During the seminar, CSB friends from the past and present will discuss the need for new evidence-based approaches, in terms of broad policy settings and individual program design and delivery.
