

Pitch your research

A full day of fun exploration of all the forms a pitch can take!

Content

Pitching requires grabbing the attention of your audience to get your message across in a just a short time. But who is your audience? Are you pitching a project to colleagues, convincing a funding agency or explaining your research to your family? And what are you then talking about? Which bits of information are relevant to which audience?

In this workshop, you will learn about communicating your research in a short pitch. By collaborating with each other and receiving repeated feedback, each of you will create a brand new pitch to introduce your research topic to colleagues, family, friends, and even their children.

Target group

Postdoctoral researchers of the University of Antwerp

Planning & location

December 5 (09h-16h), Campus Groenenborger, room to be confirmed

Trainer

The workshop is led by dr. Ben Verhoeven who—after his PhD in Linguistics—became a science communicator and presentation coach.

How to subscribe?

You can use this link, upon approval of your supervisor (deadline: November 1 2022, max. 12 participants).

We look forward to meeting you!

Talent Center

postdocs@uantwerpen.be